The College of Education & Human Development wants to say thanks to the communities that have supported the college over the past five decades. CEHD faculty, staff and students already give countless hours to the university and Atlanta community, but we want to make a special effort in the 2017-2018 academic year to volunteer even more in honor of our 50th anniversary.

Please consider pledging service hours so that we can reach our goal of 50+ service hours each semester!

Volunteer Log Guidelines

Please review the following instructions and tips for logging service hours:

1. Eligible service hours include hours spent in service to the college, university or any unmet community need in any location. The activity must provide a direct benefit for groups such as faculty, staff and students; a nonprofit entity; or a group of underserved individuals.

2. Direct service hours obviously count but so do hours you spend organizing, planning, or publicizing a service event. For example, if you organize a 5K race event, count all hours you spent planning, e-mailing, writing, calling, posting flyers and/or setting up the event, as well as the actual event hours if you are present. As long as the work pertains to service and its execution, log the hours!

3. Once you’ve completed your service hours, be sure to log them at education.gsu.edu/50th-anniversary-service. This page will have a quick form for you to fill out and submit. It’s that simple!

4. This service challenge runs from October 2017 through May 2018.

See the reverse side for suggestions on where to volunteer your time on and off campus!
Volunteer On Campus

The College of Education & Human Development has opportunities for you to volunteer your time with the outreach programs and centers housed on campus. Here are a few options:

Child Development Center
Faculty and staff can volunteer at a number of events the Child Development Center has planned this academic year, including its Read for the Record celebration on Oct. 19, its Fall Festival on Oct. 27 and its Kite Day on March 23. For more information about these and other opportunities, contact Ada Perry at aperry7@gsu.edu.

After-School All-Stars Atlanta
Those interested in volunteering with the After-School All-Stars Atlanta program can do so by e-mailing AtlantaASAS@gmail.com or visiting afterschoolallstarsatl.org/support.

March 3 Day of Service
College of Education & Human Development faculty and staff are invited to participate in the college’s Day of Service, which will be held on March 3, 2018. More details about this event will be available closer to the date.

These are just a few suggestions to get you started. Additional opportunities and suggestions will be posted at education.gsu.edu/50th-anniversary-service, so please bookmark this page and check it often. To suggest other CEHD service opportunities, please e-mail cehd@gsu.edu with “50th Anniversary Service” in the subject line.

Volunteer Off Campus

Are you passionate about working to combat hunger in Atlanta? Do you want to work with local families in need or help refugees resettle in the city? Here’s a few community organization ideas to get you started:

- Atlanta Habitat for Humanity
- Hands On Atlanta
- United Way of Greater Atlanta
- Atlanta Mission
- Atlanta Community Food Bank
- Atlanta Humane Society
- American Cancer Society
- Families First
- New American Pathways
- Goodwill of North Georgia
- Latin American Association
- Georgia Organics

Let us know about your volunteer work! #CEHD50

Snap a photo while you’re giving back and share it on social media with the hashtag #CEHD50! We’ll showcase your efforts on our social media channels and encourage others to participate.